

Tuesday February 18, 2014

Chron

Home

Local

US & World

Sports

Business

Entertainment

Lifestyle

Jobs

WINTER OLYMPICS

SOCHI, RUSSIA

Russian police cover Daft Punk, Trololo song plays during Sochi

Posted on February 7, 2014 | By John-Henry Perera

It was the viral of last year meets the viral of 2009 at the 2014 Sochi Winter Olympics.

During the opening ceremony, members of the Russian Ministry of Internal Affairs choir did a super awkward, super adorable rendition of Daft Punk's popular "Get Lucky." Said performance included gyrating hips, raging falsetto and one mustachioed man in the background who was really enjoying the performance.

Above, you'll find the cover of the same song they released back in November. NBC Olympics has the HD version of their live performance at Sochi.

Later on, Deadspin reported the infamous "Trololo Song" played during the ceremony. Unfortunately, their video is a little hard to hear but trust me, it's there.

Russian police officers cover Daft Punk (NBC)