The Sochi Opening Ceremony was a very grand, upstanding spectacle that highlighted many classical Russian artists from Tolstoy to Tchaikovsky.

But this Russian choir showed they knew how to have a little fun.

Right before the ceremony began, the police choir offered up this rousing rendition of Daft Punk's "Get Lucky."

At first, it looks like it was just a small handful of officers rocking it out alone amidst a sea of hatted uniforms.

But then, at the 1:33 mark, the whole choir stepped in to lift up their grand voices to this Grammy-winning song.
