

Russian Police Choir Performs "Get Lucky" at Sochi Opening Ceremony

2.7.2014

BY OUT.COM EDITORS

They don't understand the gay, but they sure seem to have a handle on camp.

Members of the Russian Ministry of Internal Affairs choir perform a rousing rendition of Daft Punk's "Get Lucky" before Friday's Opening Ceremony. No word on whether Daft Punk gave permission.

The less said, the better—except to say we're fairly sure they don't understand the lyrics they're singing.

We can't bring you the Olympics video, so click here.

This one, however, is their "official version."

