

Watch: Daft Punk's "Get Lucky" Performed by Russian Police Choir at Sochi Olympics Opening Ceremony

t.A.T.u. also performed at the Ceremony

By Carrie Battan on February 7, 2014 at 02:49 p.m.

 Tweet 236  Like 3.1k  +4

The ubiquity of Daft Punk's "Get Lucky" just hit a new peak at the Opening Ceremony for the Sochi Olympics. The Russian Police Choir performed an incredibly bizarre cover of the song, complete with solos and a little bit of choreography, on live television, and it's just... watch it here. Now.

The choir has been practicing—a video of them doing "Get Lucky" went viral last year, too.

In other weird Sochi Opening Ceremony news, the Russian fake lesbian pop duo t.A.T.u., who had hits in the early 00s with "All the Things She Said" and "Not Gonna Get Us", also performed. They did "Not Gonna Get Us".

Watch this incredible "shredded" version of "Get Lucky" and see how it stacks up:

